

Scott Fraser

“My Guitar playing started when I was 11 years old, my Father bought me a $28 Yamaha Acoustic Guitar which I still have.

Living out in the "Bush" 50 years ago there was no access to Teachers or other Guitarists like there is today. I learnt 3 chords off an old "Bloke" in our district [that was all he knew] and played along on one string with 3LK our local radio station.

Moving forward a series of bands, cheap "crappy" electric Guitars and working on a Farm meant limited practice time. I was infatuated with playing Guitar. Eric Clapton and Jimmy Page were my Heroes.

A bit further down the line found me playing Solo Gigs in Pubs all over Victoria which I still do. I tell you it's been a great ride playing for the Hells Angels in a small pub in the middle of Victoria to Playing for Heart Kids at Lindsay Fox's Car museum in Melbourne.

I better not forget to say I made a CD "Tired Town" all my own songs with Damian Howard and Brendan O'Neill who inspired me to venture further with my Music.”

Today Scott is a music tutor, plays regularly in a local hotel and you can often find him busking down in Bridge Street Mall.
